

Home depot shower

This design is supposed to be corrosion resistant. This can work for our design because we can use the same materials that they did. Even if the product looks different, the material would be the same.

This design does work and is effective, but it is stationary and our design does not necessarily need to be. This also could still get soap build up and you would still have to clean the shower head from time to time.

Shower head from Amazon

This shower head is one that can be detached from the wall and it can also be adjusted to shoot water out at different pressures. The material does not have anything that says it will not corrode however.

This design seems to be effective in the sense that it is adjustable and can be removed from the wall. The only thing is that this one seems to be prone to mold. This one also claims to be anti clog although the reviews say otherwise. This is a very good price point for shower heads tho.

Detachable Handheld Showerhead

This one is very cheap. It is stainless steel and is prone to rusting because of that. It is detachable and it has a long hose and it has high water pressure possibilities.

This one is a very good price point because it is only 7 dollars. Since it is so cheap however, that makes it not the best quality. It ships quickly, but is not that effective when it comes to durability. That is one of the things that makes this design redundant, it's cheap but does not last long at all.

Aqua Dance Shower Head

This design is said to be anti clog. It has silicon on the nozzles to help with the clogging as well as molding that happens in most shower heads. This would help with the direction in which the water shoots out since it is said to be very clean all the time.

This is a very good idea since it is adjustable when it comes to water pressure. It also has the nozzle enhancements on it so it is less prone to clogging/molding. The only thing is that this is a shower head that cannot be moved from its placement on the wall. It is also cheap, and in the reviews it actually has a lot of very good ones.

Delta Shower Head

This shower head was named one out of the three best shower heads of 2023 by the New York Times. This one is very high-tech with a pause feature so you have time to shave and stuff. There are also many different settings including everyday spray which is like rainfall and also a hair rinsing spray, which is good for as the name suggests hair washing. This one also has a massage function which is not the best but it is better than most.

The way that this is advertised is very good and all the functions are very useful. It's actually on the cheap side for something so high quality. The only thing is that there is nothing that says anti clog/mold so that means people would still have to clean it often.
