

PART D. Design Concept Generation, Analysis, and Selection

As soon as the project was assigned, we brainstormed ideas for the murals. We wanted all of them to correlate to the school's assigned mascot, which proved difficult as we brainstormed how to connect the mascots to a healthy diet. We researched many different types of murals and gained inspiration from many creative websites and applications. Using inspiration from the internet, we began to formulate a plan.

Initially, we sketched and wrote down our ideas on paper, but we had to consider digital apps to draw out our concepts. We researched different digital apps to use and landed on Ibis Paint due to its simplicity, positive feedback and reviews, and lack of cost.

The timeline for our project was not strict, although it was preferable to finish it before graduation. While the concepts were in the process of being completed, communication with the stakeholder became difficult, which slowed down the process. The goal is to complete the murals by the beginning of the next school year.
