

PART F. Consideration of Design's Viability

The main considerations in the mural designs were in regard to connecting a healthy diet to the schools' mascots. Hurley Elementary-Middle School has a Confederate soldier as its mascot, which can be quite controversial. In order to avoid controversy, we decided to include the soldier without the flag. Instead, he carries a sword that says "Hurley." We also had to consider how kids would interpret the murals. Due to the wide range of ages within the schools, we had to do very simple designs to prevent confusion among the young kids. Food may also be a sensitive subject for some, so we tried to keep our designs neutral and scientific, showing concepts such as the 5 food groups.
