

PART K. Reflections on the Design of the Project

Overall, the mural could've used a bit more artistic talent. I would've liked to work with art classes across the schools to see different ideas and sketches that they may have come up with. However, once we are able to paint the mural onto the wall, we will reach out to numerous artistic students to ask for their help in painting it. I believe that the design is clear and easy for young children to understand, and it uses bright, eye-catching colors to get their attention and brighten their mood. These murals are relevant to the cafeteria's mood and will encourage students to eat healthier.