The Piedmont Wildlife Center is involved in this problem and they are a non-profit environmental organization. They are home to over 20 different animals. They have two domesticated rabbits and would like to have a new structure for the rabbits to live in. The problems with their current structure are there is no easy access to the rabbits, you can't even see them in the enclosure, it has sharp edges, and doesn't really have levels and obstacles in it. This problem isn't something of an emergency but it should be looked into especially when their organization is about helping animals and wildlife conservation, they should be giving the rabbits the home that they need. The problem is happening at the center with the rabbit enclosure and the problem occurs when the rabbits are inside the enclosure and whenever people come to visit and see them they can't because the rabbits are where people can't see them. The enclosure is also not safe or has activity for the rabbits. This problem happens because they built a bad enclosure to start with and it seems like it wasn't given any thought and that they just built whatever to get it out of the way. This problem shouldn't happen often but it does and it can if people are educated on what the right animals need for living conditions.
