Element B: Documentation and Analysis of Prior Design Attempts

Prior Design Attempt #1 – PawHut Rabbit Hutch

Source

This design has many features that could have been thought to be used like the wheels that allow it to be moved around. Another thing is the top of the cage opens and the top of the hidey hole opens, which allows access to retrieve the rabbits easily.

Image

Details

This Rabbit Hut meets the requirements for a dark space and also allows us to see the rabbits and keep them in vision. While it's also on wheels so it can easily be moved around, it is easy to access the rabbits. Also I don't see areas where they can get hurt on sharp edges.

Analysis

This doesn't meet the requirements of it being small and making it to where it can fold down and be taken out of the enclosure. This also is like a cage itself and it doesn't contain entertainment for the rabbits.

Analysis

This house has no dark spots separation or anything to interact with or is it small and easy to clean with all the stuff in the bottom.

Details

This hutch shows space for the rabbits to get light and dark areas. Also allows access to get them from the hutch and it's easy to clean and you have room to add entertainment.

Analysis

This doesn't meet the requirements of it being small or allowing it to be closed down to smaller parts.

Source

This allows a new shape of enclosure and also allows sunlight and some little toys can possibly be added to allow them to have entertainment.

This allows the rabbits to hide and get dark while also the door opens right in front so it's easy to just grab them up and take them out. Also it allows easy cleaning.

Analysis

This doesn't allow the rabbits much space to hide from light nor does it challenge them to get any entertainment.
